NOTICE is hereby given that, by Order in Council No. 265, approved February 11th, 1954, the following regulations have been made:—

REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE DESIGN, CONSTRUCTION, AND INSPECTION OF BOILERS, PRESSURE-VESSELS, AND APPURTENANCES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

PART I

Section 1.—General Requirements

101. These regulations shall apply to all steam and hot-water boilers, pressure-vessels, heat-exchangers, air-receivers, liquid-receivers, oil-refineries, refrigerating plants, steam plants, steam-processors, or any other pressure-vessel, fitting, or piping, in so far as the same is provided for by the Act or defined in these regulations.

102. These regulations shall not apply to boilers or unfired pressure-vessels used in the operation of a railway, or to boilers or pressure-vessels subject to inspection under the "Canada Shipping Act," or to heating-boilers in private residences.

103. Except as otherwise provided in these regulations, the standards governing the design, fabrication, installation, testing, and inspection of boilers, pressure-vessels, piping, and fittings shall be those set forth in the 1952 editions of the following Codes of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and any subsequent amendments, addenda, or additions thereto when such have been approved by the Chief Inspector: "Power Boilers," "Material Specifications," "Low Pressure Heating Boilers," "Miniature Boilers," "Unfired Pressure Vessels," "Qualifications for Welding," "Suggested Rules for Care of Power Boilers," and "The A.S.A. Code for Pressure Piping."

104. Where any rule of these regulations is at variance with the requirements of the A.S.M.E. or A.S.A. Codes, the requirements of these regulations shall govern.

105. The Chief Inspector shall have power to formulate rules in cases where formulæ have not been provided by these regulations or where special circumstances render desirable an alteration to or modifications of the regulations.

106. Any Inspector appointed or authorized under the Act may increase the factor of safety on any boiler or pressure-vessel when he considers the workmanship, material, condition, or installation is such that an increased factor of safety is necessary.

107. After these regulations come into force, all fittings attached to any boiler or pressure-vessel, or used in any steam plant, refrigeration plant, or oil-refinery, shall be for new installations, such as are sanctioned by these regulations; and for existing installations, any fittings found to be unsafe, or to be replaced, shall be replaced with fittings that are sanctioned by these regulations.

108. The recommended age-limit of every high-pressure lap-seam riveted boiler shall be twenty years, after which the factor of safety shall be increased by at least 0.1 each year, and if over 36 inches in diameter and relocated shall not be operated at a higher pressure than 15 p.s.i.

109. For the purposes of registration, one boiler horse-power shall be the equivalent of 10 square feet of heating surface exclusive of superheater service, irrespective of type, except that for electric boilers the maximum kilowatt capacity of the heating-element divided by ten shall be the horse-power rating.

110. Where vessels to be constructed to the A.P.I.-A.S.M.E. Code are accepted for registration for oil-refinery purposes, they shall be subject to shop inspection by a National Board or Provincial Inspector.

111. Propane-gas storage-tanks, other than portable cylinders, shall be constructed in accordance with the A.S.M.E. Code and Provincial L.P. Gas Regulations, and in respect to vessel design pressure and safety-valve setting, with the Dominion Board of Insurance Underwriters Pamphlet No. 58.

Portable cylinders shall be constructed in accordance with specifications of the Board of Transport Commissioners of Canada (Designation CRC) or the Interstate Commerce Commission (Designation ICC).

112. All piping used in connection with boilers, pressure-vessels, and pressure plants shall meet the requirements of the A.S.M.E. Code, and where the A.S.M.E. Code requirements are not applicable, shall meet the requirements of the A.S.A. Code for pressure-piping.

113. All low-pressure heating-boilers shall be constructed of flange or fire-box quality plate.

114. All power and miniature boilers shall be registered. All low-pressure heating-boilers exceeding 30 square feet of heating surface shall be registered.

115. Where the Chief Inspector deems it necessary in the interests of public safety to require safety appliances, repairs, modifications, or additions to any pressure equipment, irrespective of size or pressure, he may order that such changes be made, and upon due notification thereof the owner or operator of the pressure equipment shall comply therewith.

Designs, when finally approved, will be given a registration number for the Province, and vessels may be manufactured in any number to such registered designs, provided they meet the requirements of the registered design in every detail. Reference shall be made to the registration number when submitting affidavit of manufacturer pertaining to each vessel.

308. Boilers and pressure-vessels may be built from a registered design until changes are made in the regulations or codes that affect the design, in which case the design shall become obsolete, and no further construction shall be made to such design after a period of twelve months.

309. Notwithstanding the fact that a design has been approved by the Department, if it be afterwards found to be defective in any detail, the manufacturer shall be notified accordingly, and shall thereupon revise the design to meet the approval of the Chief Inspector.

310. Changes made by manufacturers in designs already approved and registered will necessitate the submitting of new drawings and specifications to the Chief Inspector for approval. In such cases the manufacturer may, at the discretion of the Chief Inspector, be required to pay fees in the same manner as if they were original designs. A change in thickness, diameter, or working-pressure shall constitute a new design.

311. When a design is submitted and not approved, a report on the same will be sent by the Department to the manufacturer by whom it was submitted, who must forward new blue-prints and specifications which shall conform with the provisions of these regulations.

312. The approval of drawings will not in any way relieve the manufacturer of responsibility in the construction of a boiler, pressure-vessel, or fitting according to these regulations.

313. Boilers or pressure-vessels, the design of which differs from the requirements of these regulations, or which have been previously installed or used, may not be shipped into any Province for installation without first obtaining permission in writing from the Chief Inspector, who shall, at the time of the request, be supplied with complete design, drawings, specifications, affidavit of manufacturer, and the last inspection report.

314. When a boiler or pressure-vessel is delivered to a purchaser in any Province, an affidavit of manufacturer bearing the signature of the authorized shop inspector, where shop inspection is required by the code or these regulations, shall be forwarded to the Chief Inspector. In the case of boilers or pressure-vessels manufactured for stock, the name and address of the ultimate owner and location of the installation, when not available to the manufacturer at the time the boiler or pressure-vessel leaves the plant, may be filled in by the sales agent.

315. Every manufacturer shall submit to the Department for registration a complete outline of welding procedures used in the construction of boilers and pressure-vessels.

316. All low-pressure boilers of 50 square feet of heating surface and less shall be exempted from shop inspection, unless otherwise required by the Chief Inspector.

317. (a) All boilers and pressure-vessels built in other Provinces or in the United States shall be subject to shop inspection by a Provincial or National Board Inspector, and in the case of boilers or pressure-vessels built in other countries shall be subject to inspection by an authority named by the Chief Inspector.

(b) Nothing in subsection (a) shall be construed as affecting the authority of the Department to inspect any boiler or pressure-vessel at the place of installation or distribution in the Province.

Section 4.—Registration of Fittings (Fittings Include Accessories)

401. Blue-prints and specifications, in triplicate, of all fittings to be used on boilers, pressure-vessels, or pipe-lines carrying pressure shall be sent to the Chief Inspector for approval and registration before any fitting is used. The blue-prints and specifications shall indicate all sizes and thicknesses of metal, also composition of all material, tensile strength, compressive strength of all parts which are subject to compression, also the pressure to which the fitting was tested by the manufacturer, at what pressure a sample fitting ruptured when tested to destruction, and the maximum working-pressure and temperature.

402. It shall not be necessary to register each separate design of standard globe, angle, gate and check valves, ells, tees, unions, and flanges, provided they comply with the requirements of the A.S.M.E. and A.S.A. Codes as to their dimensions, identification, material, and service for which they are required. Each manufacturer shall have his standard fitting registered collectively by forwarding to the Chief Inspector an affidavit in triplicate, together with a fee of $25.

403. Should an Inspector find that a manufacturer is supplying fittings that do not fully comply with the requirements of these regulations, the registration number may be cancelled immediately.

404. For registration of fittings, the fee shall be $3 for each size registered, provided that where a number of sizes of the same pattern are fully shown on one blue-print, giving the complete dimensions of each size, a maximum fee of $10 will be charged for registration.

405. When the Chief Inspector considers it necessary, sample fittings shall be forwarded to the Department at the expense of the party registering and may be retained by the Department or returned at the registering party's expense.

406. The Chief Inspector may select any registered and approved fittings in an agent's stock and test them, and should a number of fittings made from any registered design prove to be faulty, the Chief Inspector may cancel the registration of same.

Section 5.—Registration Numbers

501. Registration numbers will be allotted by the Department to designs and specifications when approved and registered, the Province in which the design is registered being indicated by a figure following a decimal point.

502. When a design which has been registered in any Province is subsequently registered in another Province, the original registration number will be retained, but an additional figure or figures indicating the second or other Provinces in which the design may be subsequently registered shall be added after the decimal point.

503. The Provinces shall, respectively, be indicated by the following figures:—

1. British Columbia.	6. Quebec.
2. Alberta.	7. New Brunswick.
3. Saskatchewan.	8. Nova Scotia.
4. Manitoba.	9. Prince Edward Island.
5. Ontario.	0. Newfoundland.

504. For example, a design registered in Ontario and allotted the number "357" will be registered as Design No. 357.5. If this design is subsequently registered in Alberta, the registration number will be 357.52, and if afterwards registered in Manitoba, the registration number will then become 357.524, the first number being the original registration number.

505. Manufacturers submitting designs, which have already been registered in any Province, for registration in British Columbia shall give the names of the Provinces in which the designs have previously been registered, together with the registration number and date of registration.

506. The number allotted to an approved design of any fitting shall be a number preceded by a cipher and ending with a decimal point to the right of which is added the number indicating the Province in which the design is registered. For example, a design registered in Manitoba will be 0675.4.

Section 6.—Identification

601. Every boiler or pressure-vessel built under these regulations shall conform to them in every detail, and shall be distinctly stamped as follows:—

(a) For power and heating boilers:—

(1) With the letters "CRN" meaning Canadian registration number, denoting that the boiler has been constructed in accordance with these regulations. At the right-hand side of the letters "CRN" shall be stamped the Canadian registration number of the design. Immediately below the above:—

(c) The figures and letters of the stamping shall be at least ⅜ inch in size. When placed upon a permanently attached brass plate, the figures and letters may be not less than ⅛ inch in size.

(d) The letters and figures shall be legible and stamped fully into the plate of the boiler or pressure-vessel (not on the smoke-box), provided that for cast-iron boilers the stamping shall be cast into the boiler or stamped upon a permanently attached plate. For pressure-vessels made of light-gauge material, the stamping may be upon a permanently attached plate.

(e) The stamping area shall be painted and outlined in a contrasting colour and worded "This area not to be covered," provided that this requirement may be omitted in the case of fire-tube boilers, where the stamping is on the front head exposed to the products of combustion and accessible through the smoke-box door.

602. The location of stamping shall be in accordance with A.S.M.E. Code requirements, unless otherwise approved by the Chief Inspector.

603. Any identification stamping as outlined in this section shall be kept free of any covering so that the stamping is freely accessible to the Inspector at all times, and where this is impracticable the identification shall also be stamped upon a permanently attached plate which shall be kept free of covering, and shall be in addition to the stamping on the vessel.

Section 7.—Blow-down Pipes and Tanks

701. When the blow-down from any boiler having a working-pressure exceeding 15 p.s.i. is discharged into a closed sewer system, an approved blow-down tank shall be placed between the boiler and sewer for the purpose of reducing the pressure and temperature of the water entering the sewer.

702. Where blow-down tanks are provided, they shall be of approved and registered design, and have a minimum capacity or the equivalent volume to the following:—

Nominal H.P.	Size of Blow-down Tank (Inches)	Minimum Plate Thickness (Inches)
5 to 20	18x24	¼
21 to 50	24x30	¼
51 to 100	30x36	⅜
101 to 200	36x36	⅜
201 to 400	36x42	⅜
401 to 800	42x48	⅜
801 and over	48x60	⅜

(NOTE.—The lengths referred to are over-all lengths.)

In a battery of boilers the largest-size boiler shall establish the size of the blow-down tank.

703. The outlet shall be at least three times the area of the inlet-pipe to the blow-down tank and made to extend internally by means of a tee pipe to within 6 inches of the bottom and top of the tank. A vent-pipe of at least equal diameter to the outlet connection shall lead to the atmosphere from the top of the tank, and a drain connection having a minimum size of 1¼ inches shall be connected at the bottom. For convenience in cleaning, a manhole not less than 11 by 15 inches shall be provided in all tanks over 36-inch diameter. For smaller tanks two 4- by 6-inch handholes are required.

704. All designs submitted and allotted a registration number shall be built with a factor of safety of 5 to carry a pressure not less than 30 per cent of the maximum boiler-pressure.

705. Blow-down tanks shall be installed so as to permit free access for external and internal inspection.

706. All pipe, pipe connections, and fittings between the boiler and tank shall be designed for the maximum boiler-pressure, and made as direct as possible. The blow-down tank shall be so installed that wherever possible or practicable the lines from the boiler shall slope toward the tank. Where the elevation of the tank precludes the above condition, a drain shall be provided at the lowest point of the blow-down line.

707. Every boiler having a working-pressure exceeding 100 p.s.i. shall be equipped with two blow-down valves, one of which shall be of an approved slow-opening type.

708. Each boiler in a battery of boilers shall have its blow-down pipe connected in such a manner that the boiler can be isolated from the other boilers under pressure. It is also recommended that for the purpose of blowing down, boilers, when set in batteries, shall be numbered both back and front.

Section 8.—Boiler Suspension and Support

801. The following rules shall be observed in the setting of horizontal return tubular boilers:—

(a) No boiler shall be suspended from the crown or allowed to stand on a pedestal at the back end.

(b) Every boiler up to and including 12 feet in length and less than 48 inches in diameter may be supported upon four cast-iron or steel brackets resting upon substantial plates set in the brickwork, the back lugs resting upon rollers between the lugs and plate to provide for free expansion and contraction of the boiler.

(c) Every boiler over 12 feet long and 48 inches and over in diameter shall be suspended at the front and back by side lugs set in pairs, or by approved double-wing single hangers. The design of the suspension lugs or hangers and the attachment of same shall meet the requirements of the A.S.M.E. Code.

(d) Suspension, when required, shall be from steel beams, which shall be carried by and secured to steel columns having bases bolted to substantial foundations.

(f) The maximum fibre stress for suspension beams shall not exceed 15,000 p.s.i. The maximum fibre stress for suspension rods computed at the minimum net section at the bottom of the thread shall not exceed 10,000 p.s.i. for iron rods or 12,500 p.s.i. for steel rods.

(g) In case of boilers suspended from four points, since any slackening of one support throws the whole weight of the boiler on two rods, each suspension rod shall be sufficiently strong to carry one-half the total weight of the boiler when filled with water without exceeding the fibre stress specified in (f). If a link arrangement be used, the link is subjected to bending and shearing stresses in addition to the direct pull on the rods, and, consequently, in calculating the size of link required, allowance shall be made for these stresses.

(h) Supporting columns shall not be enclosed within brickwork or any part of the setting which is subject to the heat from the furnace. Columns shall be placed not less than 1 inch clear of the outer walls of the boiler or battery of boilers, so that the columns and the brickwork behind them can be readily inspected.

(i) Stacks and breeching shall, in general, be supported independently of the weight of the boiler. If, however, these components are permitted by the Chief Inspector to be supported on the boiler suspension, the suspension shall be made heavier, if necessary, to take care of the increased vertical loads and horizontal wind loads, if any, without exceeding the permissible unit stresses. The boiler brickwork shall not be considered effective for resisting horizontal loads.

802. The following rules shall be observed in the setting of water-tube and other type boilers not covered by Rule 801:—

(a) Columns.—Shall be designed in accordance with the rules of the steel construction manual of the A.I.S.C.

$$\frac{l}{r}$$ — Maximum to be 120.

(b) Beams.—When used as drum supports, the maximum deflection shall be limited to $\frac{1}{720}$ of the span. Maximum fibre stress shall not exceed 15,000 p.s.i.

When $\frac{ld}{bt}$ exceeds 6,000, reduce stress to

$$S = \frac{8{,}000{,}000}{\frac{ld}{bt}}$$

(c) Beams.—When used for supporting machinery and fans, etc., the maximum deflection shall be limited to $\frac{3}{16}$ inch in 10 feet. Maximum fibre stress shall not exceed 18,000 p.s.i. The limit of beam-depth to length of span $\frac{1}{24}$.

(d) Beams.—When used as arch supports over stokers, etc., the maximum deflection shall be limited to $\frac{1}{720}$ of the span. The maximum fibre stress shall not exceed 12,500 p.s.i.

(e) The maximum fibre stress for suspension rods computed at the minimum net section at the bottom of the thread shall not exceed 10,000 p.s.i. for iron rods or 12,500 p.s.i. for steel rods.

Section 9.—Supplementary Construction and Installation Requirements

901. Stop-valves of straightway type and approved design of the outside screw and yoke type with rising spindle shall be fitted in both steam and water connecting-pipes between the water-column and the boiler. The piping to the boiler shall be as short as possible, and conveniently arranged with crosses, having suitable plugs for clean-out and inspection purposes. A waste-pipe and blow-down valve, with a diameter of at least half the diameter of the connecting-pipes from the boiler to the column shall be fitted at the bottom of the column. In the case of low-pressure heating-boilers the valves in the water-column connections between the boiler and the water-column may be omitted. Drain-valves shall be provided on the base of the water-column and water-gauge.

902. Where the top connection is above 7 feet and under 20 feet from the floor or working-platform of the boiler-room, water-gauges shall be fitted with rods or chains, so that they may be operated from the floor or working-platform, and where the water-gauge is 20 feet or more from the operating-floor level, they shall be of the inclined or other approved type.

903. Safe and effective means, including adequate lighting, shall be provided to permit the water-level in the gauge glass to be distinctly seen at all times. Where considered necessary by the Inspector, tubular water-gauges shall be encased within a suitable guard to provide against accidents.

904. Water-gauges shall be provided with approved gauge-fittings equipped with shut-off valves, having packing-glands designed to prevent the possibility of the packing obstructing the opening in the glass or otherwise interfering with its free action.

905. Water-gauges of the remote indicator type shall be of an approved design. Such water-gauges, where used, shall be in addition to standard equipment.

906. Every low-pressure steam-boiler and every high-pressure boiler not under continuous attendance during operation, when oil, gas, or stoker fire, shall be equipped with an approved low-water cut-out device designed to shut off the fuel-feed and air-supply in the event of low water, installed in such a manner that it cannot be rendered inoperative by the manipulation of any manual control or regulating apparatus; the piping to be arranged with crosses and tees having suitable plugs for clean-out and inspection purposes. The float chambers of the low-water cut-out device shall be provided with an adequately sized blow-down pipe and valve not less than ½ inch in size.

907. Every fire-tube boiler exceeding 15 p.s.i. shall be provided with an approved fusible plug located as required by the A.S.M.E. Code, unless specifically exempted by the Chief Inspector.

908. (a) Every heating-boiler, with the exception of a vertical boiler, shall, at the time of manufacture, be provided with a permanently attached marker, indicating the lowest permissible low water-level. The marker shall be located in a prominent position and so designed that it will not be covered over by lagging of normal thickness. The marker shall be located as follows:—

(1) For boilers where the upper row of tubes is in the first pass and exposed to primary temperature combustion gases, not lower than 2 inches above the top of the upper row of tubes:

(2) For boilers where the upper row of tubes is in the second or subsequent pass and hence not exposed to primary temperature combustion gases, not lower than level with the top of the upper row of tubes.

(b) The lowest visible part of the water-glass shall in no case be lower than the marker required in Subrule 908 (a).

909. Every boiler having a working-pressure exceeding 15 p.s.i. of 50 horse-power or more shall be equipped with two separate means capable of supplying feed-water while carrying its maximum allowed pressure, but this does not necessitate two separate feed-water connections to the boiler.

910. Rules in this Section which are obviously not applicable to hot-water boilers may be ignored, but where doubt exists a ruling shall be obtained from the Chief Inspector.

911. (a) Every heating-boiler over 48 inches in diameter shall be equipped with a manhole above the tubes, and every heating-boiler 48 inches and under shall be equipped with a 4- by 5-inch handhole above the tubes in each head. On a boiler not over 6 feet in length a handhole shall be required in one head only.

(b) In a water-leg boiler, inspection openings shall be provided near the bottom in each corner, placed alternately on the four sides of the fire-box, each facing toward a different water-leg. On boilers having water-legs over 36 inches wide or 60 inches long, there shall be six inspection openings in the water-legs, with two on each alternate corner. Where screw-plugs are used, they shall be of brass and of a minimum size of 2 inches for boilers up to 300 square feet of heating surface. For boilers larger than 300 square feet of heating surface, they shall be of a minimum size of 2½ inches.

(c) Every heating-boiler shall be equipped below the tubes with a manhole or adequately sized handhole. On boilers over 39 inches in diameter such handhole shall be not less than 4 by 5 inches. Where a 4- by 5-inch handhole, placed on the centre line of the boiler, is impracticable, two 2¾- by 3½-inch handholes may be used.

(d) Wherever there is a combustion-chamber head, crown-sheet, or similar construction on a heating-boiler, there shall be provided adequate handholds for inspection and cleaning.

(e) All diameters referred to in (a), (b), and (c) are inside diameters.

912. All safety-valves used on boilers and pressure vessels shall be rated valves, tested and listed in accordance with the requirements of the A.S.M.E. Code. They shall be properly stamped with the rated capacity and the registration number. Manufacturers shall specify on the blueprints or specifications submitted for registration the number and capacity of the safety-valves which shall be used for steam-boilers, irrespective of whether or not they supply the valves.

913. Manhole and handhole doors, cover-plates, bridges, and fittings shall comply fully with A.S.M.E. Code requirements, including the specifications of material used for their construction.

914. Each main or auxiliary steam-outlet from a boiler (except at safety-valve connections) shall be fitted with a stop-valve immediately at the boiler, in addition to any other stop-valves which may be required on main or branch lines. Where two or more boilers carrying over 100 p.s.i. are connected to a common main, each boiler shall be equipped with an approved automatic stop-and-check valve located closest to the boiler, in addition to the boiler stop-valve located between the stop-and-check valve and the main steam-header. The space between the stop-and-check valve and boiler stop-valve shall be provided with an adequate drain.

915. Every boiler shall be provided with adequate provision for easy inspection of all parts of the heating surface both internally and externally. Where such is not provided, any authorized Inspector may require the owner or operator to shut down the boiler immediately and to remove any castings, cover-plates, attachments, or other obstructions which in his opinion hinder a proper inspection.

917. When a hot-water tank is heated indirectly by means of a steam coil or pipe, the pressure of the steam used shall not exceed the safe working-pressure of the hot-water tank, which shall be fitted with an approved hot-water relief-valve of not less than 1 inch size set to relieve at or below the safe working-pressure of the tank.

918. Where steam from a boiler exceeding 15 p.s.i. is used for low-pressure heating, the pressure shall be reduced by an approved reducing-valve. A by-pass shall be provided to allow the servicing of the reducing-valve. A low-pressure safety-valve of ample size and a pressure-gauge shall be installed on the low-pressure line within 10 feet of the reducing-valve.

919. Except where boiler-rooms are provided with sliding doors equipped with fusible links, all boiler-room doors shall open outwards and shall not be locked when any boiler is in operation.

920. Platforms, walkways, ladders, and stairways equipped with suitable handrails and toe-plates shall be installed to give access to and egress from all important parts of boilers and auxiliary equipment. They shall be of substantial fire-resistant construction.

921. Every air-receiver where the safety-valve is not installed upon the tank, but upon a connecting-line with a check-valve between the safety-valve and the receiver, shall be equipped with a fusible plug to relieve the pressure in the event the tank becomes overheated by fire.

922. An Inspector making an inspection shall satisfy himself:—

(a) By thorough examination that all provisions of the Act and these regulations respecting the boiler or pressure-vessel and its design, registration, construction, installation, operation, and maintenance have been and are being complied with, and that such boiler, pressure-vessel, or plant may be and is being safely used:

(b) That the safety-valves are properly set, and that the boiler, pressure-vessel, or plant is being operated at a working-pressure which does not exceed the maximum working-pressure allowed:

(c) That all engines, turbines, fly-wheels, pulleys, and other machinery are operated at safe speeds; that proper safeguards have been installed throughout the entire plant where, in the Inspector's opinion, such are required; and that the operation and maintenance of the plant and all the equipment therein meet all the requirements of the Act and these regulations.

923. (a) In all oil- or gas-fired low-pressure heating-boilers, manually operated uptake dampers shall not be installed.

(b) For power-boilers, the damper opening shall not be less than 5 per cent.

924. Reinforcement of openings alternative to A.S.M.E. rules:—

(a) Find actual minimum thickness of a blank head or seamless shell required for the design pressure:

(b) Determine the cross-sectional area to be cut from the head or shell (use longest measurements of opening if in a head):

(c) Replace one-half of this cross-sectional area as a reinforcing ring or rings either at right angles to or parallel to the opening on each side of same:

(d) The effective width of a ring or flue attached at right angles to an opening shall be limited to six times the required thickness of the material as found in (a), and any additional reinforcing required shall be provided by an attached flat plate:

(e) Where corrosion allowance is required, this shall be provided for separately from the above.

Section 10.—Pressure-gauges

1001. All gauges used on boilers and pressure-vessels subject to inspection shall be of an approved design which has been registered with the Department, and shall bear the manufacturer's name and Canadian registration number.

1002. Applications made to the Department for registration shall, in addition to describing the design in detail, be accompanied by the manufacturer's certification that the guage has passed the following tests:—

(a) Withstood for six hours a pressure equal to the maximum pressure marked on the dial without the tube showing a permanent set of more than 0.5 per cent at the end of one hour, after the release of the pressure:

(b) When subjected to calibration tests, showed an accuracy within 2 per cent on the lower fifth and upper fifth of the graduated scale, and within 1 per cent on the other three-fifths of the scale.

1003. When making application for registration, if the gauge design has been previously submitted for approval to another Province, the application shall state the registration number previously allotted the design.

Inspection

2.6. Certificates. — No boiler shall be operated without an unexpired certificate of inspection or an unexpired interim certificate.

2.7. Special Inspection.—Where an Inspector is requested to make an inspection outside the Province, it will be deemed a special inspection, and the expenses incurred by the Inspector, including a per diem charge of $30, shall be paid by the person requesting the inspection.

2.8. Annual Inspection.—(a) It shall be the duty of the Inspector to make an internal and external examination of every steam-boiler within the inspection district in which he is required by the Chief Inspector to act, before the same is used, and at least once a year thereafter. He shall also see that an engineer holding an engineer's certificate of the proper class under this Act is in charge of each steam plant before a certificate of inspection is granted.

(b) Whenever possible an annual inspection should include a hydrostatic test.

2.9. Hydrostatic Test.—When a hydrostatic test is required by an Inspector, the owner shall prepare the boilers as follows:—

(a) The boiler shall be filled with water to the stop-valve:

(b) The furnace, fire-box, smoke-box, and heating surfaces shall be thoroughly cleaned:

(c) The connections of such boiler when connected with other boilers that are under steam-pressure shall be blanked off, unless there be double stop-valves on all connecting pipes:

(d) The owner shall arrange for a certificated engineer or such other assistance as the Inspector may require to be available during the inspection.

2.10. Duties of Inspector.—An Inspector making an inspection shall satisfy himself:—

(a) By thorough examination that all provisions of the Act and these regulations respecting the boiler or pressure-vessel, and its design, registration, construction, installation, operation, and maintenance, have been and are being complied with, and that such boiler, presssure-vessel, or plant may be and is being safely used:

(b) That the safety-valves are properly set, and that the boiler, pressure-vessel, or plant is being operated at a working-pressure which does not exceed the maximum working-pressure allowed:

(c) That all engines, turbines, fly-wheels, pulleys, and other machinery are operated at safe speeds; that proper safeguards have been installed throughout the entire plant where, in the Inspector's opinion, such are required; and that the operation and maintenance of the plant and all the equipment therein meet all the requirements of the Act and these regulations.

2.11. Defective or Unsafe Boilers and Pressure-vessels.—(a) In addition to the annual inspection, it shall be the duty of every Inspector to examine at any time when, in his opinion, an examination is necessary, every plant within his inspection district which is reported to him as unsafe, or which he has reason to believe has become unsafe from any cause, and to notify the owner of the plant if a defect is discovered, stating in writing what repairs are necessary in order to render it safe.

(b) If a defect is discovered in a steam-boiler which is under steam-pressure, and if, in the opinion of the Inspector, the defect may cause immediate injury or damage, he shall order the engineer in charge to draw the fire and blow off the steam, and the engineer in charge shall obey the order forthwith without reference to anyone else.

(c) An Inspector may inspect any pressure-vessel or hot-water boiler within his inspection district whenever he is of opinion that an inspection is necessary or in the interests of safety, and upon making the inspection the Inspector may make an order in writing imposing such requirements in respect of the management, use, and operation of the pressure-vessel or hot-water boiler as he considers necessary, and may by the order prohibit the further use or operation of the pressure-vessel or hot-water boiler until his requirements have been complied with.

(d) Every Inspector shall have the right, at all reasonable hours, to examine steam-boilers and pressure-vessels in course of construction or repair, as well as those in operation, and to refuse to grant a certificate of inspection for any steam-boiler or pressure-vessel found to be defective or which does not comply with the provisions of this Act or the regulations, or in respect of which the opportunity for examination requested by the Inspector has been refused or withheld.

2.12. Inspection of Steam-pipes.—All steam-pipes and connections are to be carefully examined by the Inspectors at each inspection. Inspectors may submit all main steam-pipes to a hydrostatic test of twice the working-pressure of the boilers to which they are connected as often as in their judgment they may deem it necessary, provided, however, that the hydrostatic test to be applied to copper pipes shall not exceed one and one-half times the working-pressure of the boilers to which they are connected.

2.13. Inspectors May Drill Test-holes Where Necessary.—When the Inspector has doubts as to the thickness of the material used on any boiler, fitting, or apparatus, he may order holes to be drilled in the part in question to ascertain the thickness.

2.14. Lowest Pressure of One Boiler in a Battery to Be Taken.—When more than one boiler is connected to a main steam-pipe and for any reason the working-pressure of one of them is reduced, the safety-valves on the other boilers so connected shall be set to correspond with the safety-valves on the boiler carrying the lowest working-pressure, and, if necessary, the safety-valve area on the high-pressure boiler shall be increased.

2.15. Fire-line to Be Protected.—Inspectors shall satisfy themselves that the fire-line of the heating surface is at least 2 inches below the prescribed minimum water-line of the boiler in all horizontal and locomotive-type fire-box boilers. Inspectors shall satisfy themselves that the flues and tubes are round and true; also that the openings for the passage of water and steam respectively, and all pipes and tubes exposed to the heat, are of proper dimensions and free from obstructions.

2.16. Repairs.—Every major repair made to any boiler or pressure-vessel shall be reported in writing to the Chief Inspector within thirty days; such report shall state the nature of the repair and the name of firm or persons by whom it was effected. No structural repairs shall be made to any fly-wheel or band-saw wheel without the approval of an Inspector.

2.17. Handrails for Fly-wheels, etc.—Inspectors shall see that all fly-wheels, pulleys, and belting in the engine and boiler rooms are properly protected, and that the keys in pulleys do not project beyond the ends of shafting, and that set-screws on collars are countersunk when considered necessary.

2.18. Fly-wheels.—All engines having fly-wheels must be equipped with automatic stop-governors, except in cases where the Inspector considers this provision unnecessary. The maximum rim velocity for cast-iron fly-wheels shall be 6,000 feet per minute. Fly-wheels built in segments must have the flanges and bolts of the rim of sufficient strength to resist the force due to its velocity, and the flanges and bolts of the hub must be of sufficient strength to resist the stress due to keying to the shaft; the combined area of the bolts at each joint should be about 0.28 of the cross-section of the rim or hub, at that point, to be of equal strength.

2.19. Band-saw Wheels.—(a) Except for a distance not to exceed 1 inch from the edge of the rim, the minimum rim thickness shall be $\frac{9}{16}$ inch for wheels up to and including 6 feet in diameter, $\frac{5}{8}$ inch for wheels over 6 feet up to and including 9 feet, and $1\frac{1}{16}$ inch for wheels over 9 feet.

C = constant applicable to the case as provided for in Rule 2.37.

2.39. Unequal Stay Pitches.—When the pitches of stays are unequal, $\frac{1^2+W^2}{2}$ is to be taken instead of p^2 in the formulæ given in Rules 2.37 and 2.38.

1 = the pitch of stays in inches in one row.

2 = distance in inches between two rows of stays.

2.40. Irregular Staying.—In case of irregular staying, $(P_1+P_2)^2$ is to be taken instead of p^2.

(b) Boilers built in British Columbia to the provisions of Rules 3.11 and 3.14 shall be stamped in accordance with Rule 2.4.

Construction

3.11. The maximum allowable working-pressure on the shell or drum of steel-plate steam heating and hot-water boilers shall be determined in accordance with the following formula. In no case shall a boiler be designed for a pressure less than 30 pounds per square inch.

$$Wp = \frac{TS \times t \times E}{R \times F}$$

Wp = maximum allowable working-pressure, pounds per square inch.

TS = tensile strength of plate, in pounds per square inch.

t = minimum thickness of shell plate in weakest course, inches.

E = efficiency of longitudinal joint or of ligaments between tube-holes, whichever is least.

R = inside radius of the weakest course of the shell or drum, inches.

F = factor of safety for new construction = 4.5

3.12. Additions to the Factor of Safety.—May be made under the provisions of Rule 106.

3.13. Minimum Size of Ligaments.—Apply Rule 2.41 of Part II.

3.14. Flat Stayed Surfaces.—Apply Rule 2.37 of Part II.

3.15. Low-water Cut-off. — Every low-pressure boiler not under continuous attendance during operation, when oil, gas, or stoker fired, shall be equipped with an approved low-water cut-out device designed to shut off the fuel-feed and air-supply in the event of low water, installed in such a manner that it cannot be rendered inoperative by the manipulation of any manual control or regulating apparatus. The float chamber of the low-water cut-out device shall be provided with an adequately sized blow-off pipe and valve not less than ½ inch in size.

3.16. (a) Every heating-boiler, with the exception of a vertical boiler, shall, at the time of manufacture, be provided with a permanently attached marker, indicating the lowest permissible low water-level. The marker shall be located in a prominent position and so designed that it will not be covered over by lagging of normal thickness. The marker shall be located as follows:—

(1) For boilers where the upper row of tubes is in the first pass and exposed to primary temperature combustion gases, not lower than 2 inches above the top of the upper row of tubes:

(2) For boilers where the upper row of tubes is in the second or subsequent pass and hence not exposed to primary temperature combustion gases, not lower than level with the top of the upper row of tubes.

(b) The lowest visible part of the water-glass shall in no case be lower than the marker required in Sub-rule 3.16 (a).

3.17. Rules in this section which are obviously not applicable to hot-water boilers may be ignored, but where doubt exists a ruling shall be obtained from the Chief Inspector.

On a boiler not over 6 feet in length a handhole shall be required in one head only.

(b) In a water-leg boiler, inspection openings shall be provided near the bottom in each corner, placed alternately on the four sides of the fire-box, each facing toward a different water-leg. On boilers having water-legs over 36 inches wide or 60 inches long, there shall be six inspection openings in the water-legs, with two on each alternate corner. Where screw-plugs are used, they shall be of brass and of a minimum size of 2 inches for boilers up to 300 square feet of heating surface. For boilers larger than 300 square feet of heating surface, they shall be a minimum size of 2½ inches.

(c) Every heating-boiler shall be equipped below the tubes with a manhole or adequately sized handhole. On boilers over 39 inches in diameter such handhole shall be not less than 4 by 5 inches. Where a 4- by 5-inch handhole, placed on the centre line of the boiler, is impracticable, two 2¾- by 3½-inch handholes may be used.

(d) Wherever there is a combustion-chamber head, crown-sheet, or similar construction on a heating-boiler, there shall be provided adequate handholes for inspection and cleaning.

(e) All diameters referred to in (a), (b), and (c) are inside diameters.
